THE BRIDE'S FAREWELL.

Farewell, mother! how are you streaming
With the smile of life and health,
In your eyes, and in your heart,
Seems this sad farewell does speak.

One to bid adieu, does weep—

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

Wining me from that bower,

With a smile of love, and a tear,

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

How my lips the name could tell!

How my heart the name could tell!

Other than I have ever seen!

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

Who has said that love should weep?

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

That other dear boy can tell?

Farewell, mother! how are you weeping?

All because of that boy, I weep.
